Sleddog enthusiasts dispute assertions

BY PAUL FREY
MVP Staff

Sleddog enthusiasts are disputing claims made by local race organizer Bill Windsor that the sport tolerates abuse by mushers directed toward race volunteers.

Windsor told the Review in a story published last week that the decision in January to discontinue the Rosebud Run Sleddog race was due to worsening abuse of the volunteers who help put on the race by racers. Windsor said that while there were isolated incidents in the past, the abuse was particularly harsh at the race held in December 2014. Windsor also said that to his knowledge, several other races that have discontinued recently were due to the same issue.

But since the story was published, racers and organizers have disputed those claims.

Irvin Wai, former president of the Grande Prairie Sleddog Derby Association, said lack of volunteer and musher interest caused this year's Grande Prairie race to be cancelled and the association to fold.

He also said when there are incidents like Windsor mentioned, they are usually isolated to newcomers to the sport, don't represent the majority of mushers and are dealt with promptly and privately by race organizers. Wai said there was one incident in three years the race was held in Grande Prairie, and organizers were able to discuss the issue with the musher and arrive at a resolution.

"In each race, there was a different component to musher dissatisfaction. A lot of times mushers are emotional about their dogs and they want to see ... the best trails to minimize injuries ... so you'll get the odd musher that will say things that are mean and are hurtful to the race organizers or race volunteers. It's rare that you'll get a whole bunch of mushers ... belittling the trail crews and the (volunteers). However, having said that, there are some individuals out there that say things that they shouldn't have."

Wai, who also raced for many years, said most mushers appreciate the efforts of race organizers.

"We mushers really value the role of volunteers. Without them out on the trail ... we wouldn't have a race. We understand they're giving up their family time and giving up their week-ends to help us enjoy our sport," he said.

Craig Ainsworth, a former musher who lives near Cranbrook, B.C. who raced for many years at most races in Western Canada, also disputed the claims made by Windsor. He participated in the race in Didsbury several times before it was relocated to Rosebud Park.

"It makes our sport look really bad. (Windsor's claims) are not right," he said, adding he heard about and read the story on Facebook.

Ainsworth noted he always took the time to thank volunteers.

"I've never seen a volunteer mistreated."

Didsbury man charged with property crimes

BY PAUL FREY
MVP Staff

A Didsbury man has been charged following his arrest in relation to a series of property crimes in Mountain View County over the past several weeks.

Kristopher Ronald Neergaard, 44, was arrested by Didsbury RCMP members on Jan. 28. Neergaard has been charged with one count of possession of a loaded prohibited firearm, careless storage of a firearm, possession of stolen property over $5,000 and possession of stolen property under $5,000.

The charges stem from an ongoing investigation into a series of break and enters in the Didsbury, Sundre and Olds detachment areas since November 2014.

Neergaard made his first court appearance on the charges on Feb. 2.

"(The investigation) was well over two months. Hopefully (the arrest) reduces property crime in the area," said Const. Keith Gill. "Any time we are able to lay a charge, we take great pride in the fact that our officers' diligent and persistent investigational skills paid off. We had several break, enters and thefts over the past few months, and unfortunately many homeowners were victimized and their property may never be recovered. With that being said, it is our hope that this recent charge will lead to a decrease in property related crime and that the citizens of our area can be assured that the RCMP will continue to put public safety as our number 1 concern."

The RCMP is attempting to identify as many owners of the stolen property as possible.

Mountainview Colts raise $21,000 for prostate cancer research

BY PAUL FREY
MVP Staff

The Mountainview Colts raised $21,159 for prostate cancer research at their final home game of the 2014-15 Heritage Junior Hockey League season on Jan. 31.

The funds will go toward the rural Ride For Dad organization benefiting cancer research at the University of Alberta.

Desmond Pink, a senior researcher with the Prostate Cancer Initiative at the university, was among the guests on hand and took part in a ceremonial faceoff before the start of the game between the Colts and the Blackfalds Wranglers.

The money was raised through a silent auction of items at the game where fans in attendance bid on the items.

In an interview, Pink said he is among a group of more than 100 clinicians, urologists, grad students and professors developing a test to measure other indicators of prostate cancer, other than the PSA test.

The objective of the test is to give doctors and patients a better snapshot of what's going on inside the body. Currently, the only way to get detailed information about what's happening inside the body is by performing a biopsy of the prostate, an extremely invasive procedure.

The research has been going on for the past three years. Researchers are currently conducting a study of 9,000 men over the next five years. They want to voluntarily collect blood, semen and urine samples from the subjects and identify both negative and positive samples from all stages of the disease.

Researchers also want to determine what the stage of cancer is in a given sample to better understand what that looks like and how that can be used as a baseline for future diagnoses.

"The money (raised) is an enormous help. It helps us pay for all the different components of the test, but a single event like this may also help us train a graduate student for a full year. That's an enormous help, because that's not just this generation of researchers and clinicians, that's the next generation," Pink said.

Another important aspect of the work is adding current samples and saving them for later when further research may be conducted.

"When you're developing a test and doing research, the majority of our days are filled with things that don't work. So the eureka moments are very seldom," he said.

Fans at the final home game of the Mountainview Colts regular season helped the Colts organization raise more than $21,000 for prostate cancer research. Here the Colts present a cheque to Desmond Pink and Jordan Overwater.

By attending events such as the Colts fundraiser and Ride For Dad motorcycle ride, researchers are able to meet the donors, giving their work more legitimacy. Pink said several fundraising events and organizations are now teaming up to work on various areas of research rather than taking diverse approaches to perhaps the same issue, as might have happened in the past.

"That's where we draw our strength from and when we get to meet these people, we get to hear their stories. Then we realize we're not just in a small room working on a piece of equipment, drawing a graph. We're working for these guys, and that hits home," Pink said, noting researchers enjoy explaining their work to donors when they visit the lab.

Don Edwards, the Colts' general manager, said the organization is glad it can help in a small way on a big issue. He said the community has always been supportive of the Colts in their efforts.

"The community all comes together. We get lots of fans, the sponsorship's great, and it's just a great event," he said.

chair of the Rural Ride For Dad, said the Colts organization has been a great support to the ride, raising about $150,000 over the five years the two organizations have partnered together. Overwater said the Rural Ride For Dad is hoping to expand the fundraiser to more communities that have junior B hockey teams across Canada.

"We're working toward making this a national junior B event," he said.

Helipad should be completed by the late summer

BY PAUL FREY
MVP Staff

The new helipad at the Didsbury hospital should be completed by the late summer of this year, according to officials involved with the project.

The news on the project was shared with audience members who came out to the Rosebud Health Foundation's annual general meeting on Jan. 28.

James Gunn, an official with WSP Inc., the engineering firm contracted by Alberta Health Services to design the project, told the audience at the Didsbury hospital that the final design of the estimated $400,000 project should have been completed by the end of last week. The general contractor should be awarded by the first week of April, he added. Construction should get underway by mid-May and the new pad should be operational by the end of September.

Gunn told the audience that because of the need to accommodate larger helicopters – and move the helipad further away from the hospital to adhere to Transport Canada regulations – a retaining wall approximately four metres high will need to be constructed to account for the slope of the land that exists further away from the hospital. He said the retaining wall will have weeping tile installed, to make sure that the wall isn't affected by water.

The new pad will be lit so that pilots can identify it as they approach the hospital. The hospital and nearby Aspen Ridge Lodge will also be equipped with obstruction lights to warn pilots of the buildings.

In an interview following the presentation, Gunn said part of the process involves letting the fill settle for two to three months. In the meantime, project officials will work with Transport Canada on getting the helipad certified, which generally takes about six months.

"We'll start on the (certification) paperwork once we get the design finalized. Over the course of that, there's a number of documents we have to get in place, but we're hopeful that we can work with them to have that in place by the time September rolls around and when we're done construction that will align with Transport Canada's final audit of the surface," he said.

Clem Kuelker, chair of the helipad subcommittee of the Rosebud Health Foundation, said everyone involved with the health foundation is glad that the project is moving ahead.

"In general, we are satisfied with the progress that is being made," he said.

Because there are so many helipads throughout the province that no longer meet the Transport Canada regulations, a priority list according to how many STARS landings they will likely have has been compiled.

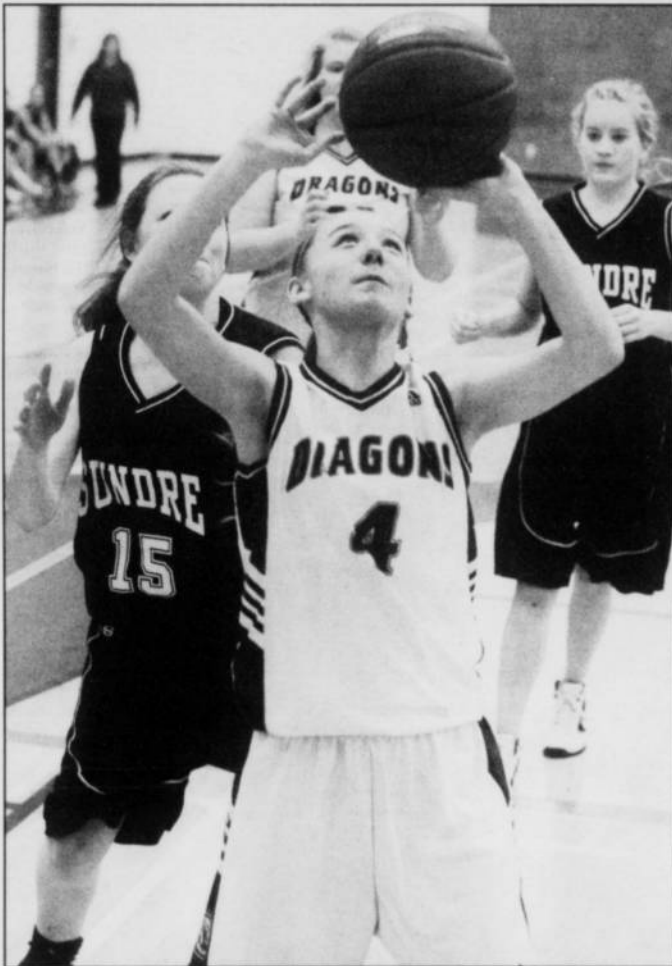

Didsbury has among the lowest number of landings, so without the intervention of the Rosebud Health Foundation raising money for the project, Didsbury likely would not have received an upgraded helipad for another 15 years.

But because the health foundation raised the money needed, the project will proceed many years ahead of schedule, Kuelker said.

"The areas with the most need where the most landings take place will have priority over (places) like Didsbury where we're reasonably close to the hospital by road transportation. So that's why we're on the bottom of the list. That's why the Rosebud Health Foundation went ahead with providing the funds to get this built in Didsbury long ahead of time," he said.

"It proves that the community saw the benefit of having this facility in place and reacted accordingly."

Third candidate plans to run for PC nomination in local riding

BY DOUG COLLIE
MVP Staff

Another person plans to run for nomination as the Progressive Conservative candidate in the Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills riding.

Olds town councillor Debbie Bennett announced Friday (Feb. 6) that she plans to seek the party's nomination.

As of February 6, she was the first woman to run for the nomination. She joined fellow Olds town councillor Wade Bearchell and former Mountain View County councillor Ron Richardson in the race.

Like other candidates, Bennett says she decided to run for the nomination because she believes in the steps Premier Jim Prentice has made to turn the fortunes of the Progressive Conservatives around and to deal with current low price of oil.

Bennett says she wants to see more money spent on education to enable youth to work with the latest technology and thereby have an advantage in tomorrow's world of work.

She also wants to see more money spent to fix infrastructure such as roads and bridges throughout the riding.

Bennett said she was encouraged by people throughout the riding to throw her hat into the ring.

As of Friday, tentative plans called for Feb. 28 to be the deadline for people to enter the race. The vote would take place during a nomination meeting tentatively scheduled for March 14 at the Royal Canadian Legion in Olds.

Ice Fest a success

Skaters wait to go onto the ice during the 2015 Central Region Open Ice Fest at the Didsbury Memorial Arena on Feb. 7.

BY LEA SMALDON
MVP Staff

Hundreds of skaters converged on Carstairs and Didsbury Feb. 6 - 8 for the 2015 Ice Fest.

"The weekend was a great success with approximately 670 skaters and families coming," said Carrie Kmiecik, president of the Carstairs Skating Club.

Skaters from 51 clubs from across the province were entered in the Central Region Open competition which ranked competitors on individual merits and in some cases, had them competing for top spots in their flights.

Star 1 to 3 are ranked on individual merits and receive a report card and ribbon to show their overall levels.

Star 4 to adult are ranked on individual merits as well, but compete with each skater in their flight for gold, silver or bronze.

The skaters received a report card with the judges' assessments, which critiqued their elements and artistic ability. The report cards help the individual skater see where they can improve and what they are doing well, said Kmiecik.

Planning for the three-day event had been ongoing since the skating club was apprised last summer that it had been chosen to host the competition.

There were 23 judges, data specialists and referees on site between the two facilities in Carstairs and Didsbury.

Approximately 49 volunteers per location were needed for the whole weekend.

"The Carstairs Skating Club has amazing volunteers and along with some community members we made it all happen," said Kmiecik. "A big thank you to Carstairs' and Didsbury's arena and concession staff for helping make everything run smoothly."

Town to hire IT staffer

BY PAUL FREY
MVP Staff

Council members gave the go-ahead to administrators to begin the process of recruiting a person to oversee the town's information technology systems.

The town recently completed a request for proposals for IT services in tandem with both Carstairs and Cremona.

There were 13 responses, with 12 meeting some of the needs of the municipalities. Of the 12 respondents that were included for councillors' information, fixed annual costs quoted ranged from $32,400 to $138,000.

Many of the respondents didn't specify how many hours they would be available in Didsbury for town staff to take advantage of their expertise, while many also quoted what administration considered to be high hourly rates above what they would charge if they were called out beyond their specified hours of availability.

Of those that quoted an additional rate, the lowest rate was $75 per hour, while the highest was $150 per hour.

In preparing a report to councillors about the issue, Christofer Atchison, the town's manager of legislative services, said the prices quoted were much higher than Didsbury officials had anticipated.

Town staff began looking for a new IT service provider since the contract with Mountain View County - which had been extended to the end of February from its original expiration date of Dec. 31, 2014 - is due to expire shortly.

"We honestly think that council (should) consider hiring (a town staffer)," Atchison said.
